

Pat has the life that she's always wanted at Carleton Place Terrace!

Pat said that within a day of arriving, she felt that it was home. She feels that she is really living, and it is finally the beginning of her life.

Pat, 79 years young, was an office manager for her husband and father for many years. She also ran a B & B named "Top O' Triangle Mountain" in Victoria, B.C. for 18 years before moving to Ontario and the Ottawa area. Pat is most proud of her children, all of whom are well educated, but most importantly all followed their dreams. One of her children has overcome addictions and Pat talks about this journey with obvious pride, love and support.

CARLETON PLACE TERRACE

by Symphony

Pat's wisdom for the younger generation is to not get divorced and work things out. She says you won't be in love all your life, but you can choose to love. Pat came to Carleton Place Terrace for respite while her husband was in palliative care.

She appreciates the staff at Carleton Place Terrace and the residents and says that she loves the fact that she can call almost everyone by name. She also loves Bingo, even though she hardly ever wins!
